AB&T launches Community Banker role to foster stronger community connections

Albany, Georgia - Community banking has the power to bring people together, foster economic growth, and create a thriving environment for businesses and individuals. AB&T understands the significance of community and recognizes it as the bedrock of its mission. As the bank looks towards the future, it is proud to announce the creation of a new position - Community Banker.

Terri Christian will transition from her current role as Branch Manager to assume the multi-faceted responsibilities of the Community Banker position. Terri's experience and expertise make her the ideal candidate for this role, which encompasses various crucial aspects of community banking.

In her new capacity, Terri will manage and grow a portfolio of clients, and work diligently to develop our Client Finance and Workplace Banking suite. Terri will be responsible for directing AB&T's community service initiatives and investments. By actively engaging with the local community, she will foster meaningful partnerships with relevant agencies and organizations to expand AB&T's Community Reinvestment Act footprint.

"Terri's appointment as our Community Banker is a testament to her remarkable banking career, characterized by her heart for people, dedication to service, and commitment to making a positive impact on the community," said Perry Revell, CEO of AB&T. "We believe that through this role, Terri will be able to further extend our reach and provide a broader range of opportunities for our customers, allowing us to continue delivering the Gold Standard of community banking."

AB&T's focus on community has always been unwavering, and the introduction of the Community Banker position solidifies its commitment to fostering strong relationships, supporting local businesses, and driving economic development. By leveraging Terri's compassion, expertise, and relational skills, AB&T aims to empower individuals and businesses to thrive, irrespective of their aspirations.
